[With thanks to Sylvia & Terry C. for this recommendation]. There is a little crêperie in Granville (50) called La Mouette (the Seagull) at 63 rue du Port, which also does fish & chips to die for! It is run by a young French couple who speak very good English and apparently have been to England several times and they love our fish & chips. ### The Cotentin Windmill - visit a working mill

Worth a drive up the Cotentin peninsular, this working windmill at Fierville-les-Mines (50, near Portbail) dates from 1744. It is a 'tower' windmill - as the vanes glide on a rail at the top of the tower to bring them into the wind, as opposed to a 'pivot' mill in which the whole body of the mill rotates. Renovated in 1997 it is one of the few working mills in France that still grinds wheat, buckwheat and spelt, and welcomes over 10,000 visitors each year. At an altitude of 120 metres it offers exceptional views over the Normandy bocage. You can see the renovated miller's house, the magnificent thatched wooden barn (now a shop selling local produce) and exhibition hall. Open April/May/June/Sept.: Tues. to Sun.: 14h-18h; in July & Aug.: daily, 10-12 & 14-19h. www.moulin-du-cotentin.com

Cheese of the Month : Cantal

This is a firm, smooth-textured cheese produced in the Auvergne region of central France. One of the oldest cheeses in France, it came to prominence when Marshal Henri de la Ferté-Senneterre served it at the table of Louis XIV of France. [Senneterre is also responsible for the popularity of Saint-Nectaire cheese]. Made with cow's milk, it is similar to Cheddar, with a strong, tangy butter taste. It is used in soups, aligot, fondue and gratins. Good with medium-bodied red wines.

Something you didn't know you didn't know . . .

'Cantal' and 'Banon' cheeses first appeared 2,000 years ago – 'Cantal' in the centre of France and 'Banon' in the south. They were also appreciated in Ancient Rome and were mentioned by Plini the Elder. 'Reblochon' was made in the French Alps in the 13th century. 'Conté', one of the most famous cheeses, was made in the east of France during the 11th century. 'Camembert' was born in secrecy during the French Revolution, around 1789. Each cheese has its own history.

Lest we forget : local history

The women of the Résistance – the unsung heroes. History sometimes forgets the role of the women – staying in the shadow of the men and bravely doing their part, volunteering for actions less spectacular but so necessary. One such heroine was Germaine Bernard:

Born in August 1920, Germaine married René Justin, a telephone operator. When he announced his engagement in the Résistance she was in full support. Living at 'Le Chêne Vert' the family grew with 3 boys from 1940 to 1943, and also in an attic room they sheltered POWs who had escaped from the camp at Vautorte. Germaine found ingenious ways to feed all the extra mouths, but with the intensified inspections and searches the Justin family had to leave and found refuge in the HQ at 'La Chatterie' in Montenay. This didn't prevent Germaine continuing to get supplies to the Résistance groups, often cycling as far as St Denis-de-Gastines to fetch flour, also providing clothing for those coming to 'La Chatterie' and preparing equipment packs for René's 'Group of 8' who joined up with the American forces at Landivy. [Issue 60]
